

VOICE & TONE

BRAND VOICE & TONE GUIDE

A guide for every YULLR employee — how we sound in training videos, product copy, support, and everywhere else we speak as YULLR.

WHO WE ARE

YULLR is built by people who understand skiing, racing, coaching, and mountain operations. We are a technology company, but we should never sound like a traditional technology company.

Our software may be sophisticated, but our communication is simple, approachable, practical, and grounded in real mountain experience. A viewer should feel like an experienced coach or teammate is walking them through the process.

YULLR removes the busy work so coaches can spend more time coaching, athletes can spend more time improving, and resorts can deliver a better experience.

OVERALL PERSONALITY

The YULLR voice is:

Confident — without arrogance

Professional — without corporate

Friendly — without overly casual

Knowledgeable — without sounding technical

Helpful — without patronizing

Authentic — to mountain culture

Efficient — without feeling rushed

Imagine an experienced coach explaining something to another coach while riding the chairlift. They know their craft, they are relaxed and practical, and they do not overcomplicate things. That is the YULLR voice.

OUR PHILOSOPHY

Every feature exists to make someone's day easier. Never explain a feature simply because it exists. Explain why it matters, when to use it, and how it saves time or improves the experience.

Instead of: "Click Save."

Say: "Once you've entered the information, click Save so it's immediately available to the rest of your coaching staff."

OUR AUDIENCE

Training content is primarily created for coaches, program directors, resort staff, mountain operations, team administrators, and occasionally parents.

Assume viewers are intelligent, experienced, and busy. Never assume they are technical. Explain software naturally using plain language.

WRITING STYLE

Aim for roughly an 8th-grade reading level. Keep sentences short, explanations simple, and language conversational.

- Use active voice and everyday language.
- Avoid corporate jargon and marketing buzzwords.
- Avoid unnecessary technical terminology.
- Use acronyms only when the audience will already understand them.
- If something can be explained in fewer words, it probably should be.

NARRATION TONE & PACE

The narrator should sound calm, confident, patient, helpful, trustworthy, and encouraging. Never robotic, overly excited, sales-focused, condescending, or overly formal.

Introduce one idea at a time. Each sentence should naturally flow into the next, giving viewers enough time to follow what is happening on screen without needing to pause or rewind.

EXPLAIN THE WHY

Every action should have context. People remember purpose better than instructions.

Instead of: "Click New Session."

Say: "Create a new session to keep your athletes, coaches, and captured video organized in one place."

POSITIVE LANGUAGE

Guide users rather than correcting them. Frame instructions positively and assume the viewer is capable.

Instead of: "Don't forget to..."

Say: "To keep everything organized..."

SPEAK THE LANGUAGE OF THE MOUNTAIN

Use language that feels natural on the hill: athlete, coach, run, training lane, race day, finish area, Capture Point, session, trail, lodge, first chair, and mountain operations.

Avoid language such as workflow optimization, stakeholders, solution architecture, end users, digital transformation, synergy, and other generic corporate terminology.

YULLR belongs on the mountain, not in a boardroom.

PRODUCT POSITIONING

YULLR is not the hero. The coach, athlete, and resort are the heroes. YULLR simply makes them more effective.

Technology should quietly work in the background. Never oversell the software. Let the experience speak for itself.

PREFERRED VOCABULARY

Prefer words such as capture, review, organize, compare, analyze, improve, assign, manage, develop, train, share, and prepare.

Avoid overusing words such as leverage, utilize, revolutionary, disruptive, cutting-edge, next-generation, and game-changing. The product should feel confident enough that it does not need hype.

THE PLAYFUL SIDE OF YULLR

YULLR has personality. We love skiing and mountain culture, and we do not take ourselves too seriously. That personality should occasionally show through in narration — subtle, warm, and authentic, about one lighthearted line every 30 to 60 seconds in short-form narration.

"That takes less time than riding the chair back up."

"Nice. That's one less thing to think about before first chair."

"Think of this as your digital race shack."

"Unlike New England weather, these settings stay exactly where you leave them."

"Easier than finding your gloves in the lodge."

Ski puns are welcome when they feel natural: "Let's drop into the next section," "You're on the right line," "Smooth as fresh corduroy," "That's a clean line," and "From here, it's all downhill." Never force a joke — one memorable line beats five average ones.

THE LIFT RIDE TEST

Would this sound natural if an experienced coach explained it to another coach while riding the chairlift? If yes, it is probably right. If it sounds like marketing copy trying too hard to be funny, rewrite it.

RECOMMENDED LESSON STRUCTURE

1. Introduce what the viewer will learn.
2. Explain why it matters.
3. Walk through the process step by step.
4. Reinforce the outcome.
5. Transition naturally to the next lesson.

The viewer should always understand what they are doing, why they are doing it, and what happens next.

THE FEELING WE WANT TO LEAVE BEHIND

- "That looks easy."
- "I know exactly what to do."
- "This is going to save me time."
- "I can start using this today."

Viewers should never feel overwhelmed or feel like they need to be technical to use YULLR.

THE YULLR PROMISE

YULLR was built by people who understand life on the mountain. Our technology works behind the scenes so coaches can coach, athletes can improve, resorts can operate more efficiently, and everyone can spend less time chasing video and more time enjoying the sport they love.

SIMPLE. RELIABLE. HELPFUL.

Always ready before first chair.
